Richardson, Barth, and Overweg, to Central Africa This expedition is under the direction of Mr. James Richardson (well known from his travels in the northern portion of the Great Sahra in 1845 and 1846), who is directed by the English Government to proceed to Tripoli, and thence across the Sahra to the Bilad el Sudan or Negroland as far as lake Chad, for the purpose of concluding commercial treaties with the chiefs of the countries he is to visit.
